Visual and Performing Arts - Assistant Professor of Voice and Opera

Applications are being invited for a full time tenure-track position as Assistant Professor of Voice and Opera in the Department of Visual and Performing Arts. This is a full-time position, which begins August 2010.

The Department seeks a dynamic individual who is qualified to teach individual and group voice lessons (beginner’s voice class, diction class, vocal pedagogy, and studio class). Responsibilities will include teaching undergraduate voice students and may include teaching Introduction to Music.

Requirements for this position include proven artistry as a performer with a strong commitment to teaching and recruiting outstanding students. Experience directing an Opera Workshop and a Doctoral degree are required along with successful teaching experience.

The following materials constitute a complete application packet: (1) letter of application which discusses the candidate’s qualifications and particular suitability for the position; (2) a detailed and updated curriculum vitae; (3) three current professional letters of reference; and (4) both undergraduate and graduate transcripts (unofficial copies are acceptable at this time).
