

New Faculty Bio

Name: Kimani Bishop Ph.D

Position: Visiting Assistant Professor in Music

Department of: Music

Bio:

Kimani Bishop Ph.D
Department of Music
Lincoln University

Kimani Bishop is a Visiting Assistant Professor in the Department of Music at Lincoln University. With a background in ethnomusicology, he brings a dynamic and inclusive approach to teaching, informed by both scholarly research and practical experience. His academic interests include Caribbean studies, Cultural studies, Religious Studies, and Performance Practice.

Prior to joining Lincoln University, Bishop has taught American Popular Music at the University of Washington (Seattle). He is passionate about fostering student engagement and supporting diverse learning environments, and has mentored students from a wide range of backgrounds.

His teaching philosophy focuses on dialogue, collaboration, and practice.

Educational Background:

Doctor of Philosophy. University of Washington (Seattle). Ethnomusicology. Elective Fields: Performance.

Master of Arts. Tufts University. Ethnomusicology

Bachelor of Arts. Trinity College (Hartford). Music (General)

Classes Taught:

University of Washington - Teaching Assistant - 2024

Tufts University - Teaching Assistant - 2020

Research Interest:

Caribbean studies, Christian ontology, Cultural studies

Email: