Bio:

Professor André P. Llewellyn

Professor André P. Llewellyn has over a decade of experience in the human services field, spanning education, family support, and developmental disability services. His career has centered on building inclusive, strengths-based programs that empower individuals and families while strengthening community connections. He is recognized for combining innovative, data-driven strategies with a human-centered approach that emphasizes equity, advocacy, and relationship-building. In the classroom, Professor Llewellyn draws on his professional background to prepare students to engage thoughtfully with the diverse realities of human services, emphasizing leadership, collaboration, and culturally responsive care.

Educational Background:

1. BA Theology - Philosophy and Outreach
2. Master of Social Work - Organizational Management and Leadership

Classes Taught:

1. Child Welfare Services
2. Human Services Methods
3. Human Services Capstone

Research Interest:

My research interest centers on social service leadership, Black fatherhood, and community-centered mental health care, particularly those rooted in First Peoples and African/African diasporic traditions that emphasize collective responsibility. I am also focused on community engagement and on how innovative, data-driven approaches, along with funding strategies and grant writing, can sustain impactful human service programs.
