Dr. Judith A.W. Thomas, chairperson of the Department of Education, was featured in the Sept. 2 edition of The National Leader, a black national newspaper printed in Philadelphia. She discussed the status of black education from the 1960s to the present time. Also on Sept. 2 Dr. Thomas addressed student teachers at Kutztown State College at the Annual Bilingual Bicultural Conference. This is the third year that she has been invited to address this group on "Linguistic Differences and School Adjustment." On Sept. 30 the Department of Education held its Second Annual Reading Conference in the Langston Hughes Memorial Library. The theme of the Conference was "Language and Comprehension: Implications for Teachers." Workshops were offered by Department of Education faculty: Dr. Thomas, Dr. Mary Applegate, Dr. Anthony Applegate, Dr. Virginia Modla, Professor Joanne DeKonty, and Professor Theresa Saunders. Dr. Joseph Rodgers of the Language Department offered a workshop on "Diagnostic and Instructional Strategies for Spanish-speaking Students."

Mrs. Faulcon Heads Ladies Auxiliary

MRS. JACQUELINE BEACH FAULCON

Mrs. Jacqueline Beach Faulcon, recently elected president of the Ladies Auxiliary of Lincoln University, is well known in musical circles. Mrs. Faulcon, a soprano, performed on July 18 at the Ninth International Biographical Centre's International Congress on Arts and Communications at Queens College in Cambridge, England. The Congress was held from July 17 to July 24. Her performance as soloist with the Cambridge Symphony Orchestra at the fourteenth century Parish Church of Thaxted in Essex County was the final event of the well known Thaxted Festival. Her selections were in French, Italian, and English.

In addition to her performance, Mrs. Faulcon and her husband, Dr. Clarence A. Faulcon, a member of the faculty at Morgan, brought greetings as delegates to the Congress from Governors Pierre S. duPont III of Delaware, Harry Hughes of Maryland, and Richard L. Thornburgh of Pennsylvania. They also brought greetings from Senators William V. Roth Jr. of Delaware and John Heinz III and Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania as well as Representative Richard T. Schulze of Pennsylvania and The Links, Inc.

Upon her return to the United States, Mrs. Faulcon received congratulations from Vice President George Bush, Senator Paul S. Sarbanes, and Congressman Parren J. Mitchell. Now she is busy preparing for the 50th anniversary of the Ladies Auxiliary, which will be celebrated from April 24 to May 1, 1983.

Three Doctorates Join LU Faculty

Dr. Joseph N.D. Dadoo, who has joined the Department of Physics as an assistant professor, received his B.S. degree from Polytechnic of the South Bank, London, his M.S. degree from Bedford College, University of London, and his Ph.D. from King's College, University of London. During the 1981-82 school year he was an associate research fellow at King's College.

Dr. Regina Turner, assistant professor of English, holds the B.A. degree from the University of Maryland, the M.A. degree from Atlanta University, and the Ph.D. degree from Bowling Green State University. She comes to Lincoln from Oberlin College in Ohio.

Dr. Robert F. DeHaan, the new director of the Master of Human Services Program, received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. The degree was in human development with concentrations in counseling psychology and group dynamics. Prior to coming to Lincoln, Dr. DeHaan was secretary and director of research and external relations at the Metropolitan Collegiate Center of Germantown in Philadelphia. He was, at one time, a member of the faculty of Hope College, where he served as chairman of the Department of Psychology for nine years.

Spotlight On Yorke Jones

If there is a boy anywhere, who is inclined to be discouraged on account of poverty, obscurity or lack of opportunity, he should study the life of Rev. Yorke Jones, D.D., Professor of Homiletics, Church History, Rhetoric and English Literature at Biddle University. The story begins with a nameless little waif "Somewhere in Virginia", and has to do with years of loneliness and struggle up to manhood and a place of large usefulness in the Kingdom and a position of leadership in the race.

Yorke Jones was born somewhere near Petersburg, Virginia, possibly in Chesterfield County. It must have been early in the sixties (1860's), since he remembered some of the closing scenes of the war and recalled the names of such places as City Point, Bermuda Hundred and others made historic in those awful days. With reference to his mother, he knew only that she was called "Aunt Caroline." His father visited them sometimes, but he had no information as to his name or his fate.

A few things stand out clearly, however. A twin brother died and an older brother was with him in a big room at Hampton, Virginia. This must have been about the Surrender or soon after. Next morning the brother was gone and Yorke was alone in the world. He did not know when nor why the name of Jones was given him. For a while, he was cared for and taught by the Friends who had established a school at Hampton. Later he was transferred to an orphan's home in Philadelphia, known as the "Shelter," and was sent from there to Burlington, New Jersey. A home was found for him with a family of Friends by the name of Pennell, near Media, Pennsylvania.

The things he learned and the habits he formed while under the influence of these good people steadied and gave direction to what is recognized as a life of great influence. The first date he remembered in this connection was 1868. He remained with the Pennell family till 1875 and then went to work for another farmer.

The story of his intellectual development is interesting. Working in the cornfield, he gathered, as boys will, some interesting specimens of quartz to be found in that section. These he prized highly. Mr. Gifford noting his interest presented him a book on geology which he added to his collection.

Through this, the world of books began to open to him and he was soon passionately fond of history. He was now attending the public school three months in the year and working on the farm the rest of the time at eight dollars per month. Under the tutelage of the Friends he had come to feel the need of an education and in January, 1877, went to Lincoln University with $51.00 to get what he called a "practical education," which he imagined would require about six months. As a matter of fact, he remained at Lincoln for years. Fortunately he fell in hands of consecrated, sympathetic teachers and during the first week at college, made the great decision. He was soon confronted by the question of what he should do in life and was led into the ministry as a field where he could make his life count for most. After that his way was clear. He worked through both the College and Theological courses brilliantly and graduated at the head of his class. His record as a student entitled him to a position as tutor. This, with assistance from the Board and other quarters, made him easy financially and enabled him, under the direction of one of his teachers, to begin the nucleus of a library which has grown with the years. While taking his Theological course he spent his vacation in colportage work. The first was spent in Chester, Pennsylvania, and the second at Petersburg, Virginia. Here he was impressed with the opportunity for a colored Presbyterian Church and the following year returned and started a mission.

For a while he was employed by the Synod of Virginia (white), but finally settled down to work out the problem at Petersburg with the assistance of the Freedman's Board. The Central Presbyterian Church was established and presided over by him until 1893. At that time he was called to the position at Biddle University, where not only his scholarship but also his splendid Christian spirit has been felt by hundreds of young men who have come under his influence. Being a professor, he must be exact, and even technical, but he is never dry for his work is shot through with a fine spirit of evangelism, and so it comes to pass that he taught not only from his textbooks but with his life as well.

On July 9, 1888, Dr. Jones was married to Mrs. Susan C. Grigg of Petersburg, Virginia. She had five children all of whom were reared and educated.

Though not in the regular pastorate, he preached regularly. He attended three General Assemblies of his church. He believed that in the last analysis the problems confronting the race must be solved by religion.

Dr. Jones had an exceptional gift for music and while wholly self-taught in vocal and instrumental music, had himself taught these arts of expression to considerable extent and beyond question would have achieved much in this field had he given his sole attention to it. His literary talent is of an equally high order, his poem "The Slave Mother's Song" and one of his books, The Climbers, having been well received. One with versatile gifts must necessarily sacrifice a promising career in as many different directions as his abilities fit him to pursue, yet after all, in the ministry and in educational work there is opportunity to put everything to right use and so these talents were not lost, but were additional opportunities for larger service.

Solar equipment, wind turbines, attic insulation, and heat pumps were some of the exhibits shown by local businessmen.

Bailey Addresses Freshman Students

Mr. Herschel L. Bailey, director of Lincoln's SPEED and Upward Bound programs, was the keynote speaker at the annual Freshman Banquet held during Freshman Orientation Week. Concerned about the high attrition rate at Lincoln, Mr. Bailey directed his remarks to his audience with a view towards decreasing the attrition rate.

"You must have motivation, which is primarily internal, and you must set goals for yourself if you want to be successful," Mr. Bailey stated. "You have the freedom to choose the course of action you will take."

Using the letters in GOALS, Mr. Bailey told the freshmen and new students at Lincoln that they must be actively engaged in

Rivero Makes Athletic Hall of Fame

Manuel Rivero was inducted into the Hall of Fame of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics on June 14, 1982. All enshrinees were honored at a luncheon in Hollywood, Fla. He was also inducted into the Douglass Hall of Fame on June 4, 1978.

Rivero began a tenure of coaching that had him involved in seven different sports: football, baseball, basketball, wrestling, boxing, tennis and track. During his tenure his teams recorded an undefeated basketball squad, championships in the CIAA and Del-Val Orange Blossom Classic and wrestling and boxing titles for Lincoln.

After being named director of athletics in 1969, Rivero sparked a drive that eventually led to the construction of a new gymnasium. His success and reputation as a planner and coordinator of various projects captured the attention of governmental people and in 1962 he was named director of the Peace Corps for Puerto Rico and then coordinator of the Central America Peace Corps Program. Being busy with these projects was not taxing on Rivero, because as the college athletic department continued to expand, he kept pace by building a new track, a new baseball field and new tennis courts -- all firsts on the Lincoln campus. In addition to his athletic associations at Lincoln, Rivero has been equally active with the academic society and the community. He served as the university marshal, a faculty representative on the Board of Trustees and chairman of the University Leadership Fund. He has received numerous awards and honors for his outstanding service and became professor emeritus on his retirement in 1977. He is enjoying retirement in his home just off campus, where he keeps in shape with golf, tennis, swimming and badminton, takes pleasure in the cultural offerings of the area, and pursues the country life with his wife of many years.
