Recent Alumni Surveyed

The Placement Office recently completed a survey of Lincoln Alumni from the classes of 1979, 1980 and 1981. The purpose of the survey was to establish the level of satisfaction with: (1) their first jobs obtained after graduation; (2) their current job; and (3) whether or not, in their opinion, the education received at Lincoln was adequate preparation for the world of work.

Approximately 450 surveys were sent to alumni who are U.S. citizens and are currently residing in the United States. One hundred ninety-four (194) correctly completed documents were returned to the Placement Office. Of these 194 alumni, 171 or 88% had a "first job" after graduation. The other 23 alumni have remained unemployed or have been continuing their education since graduating from Lincoln.

Of those who had a "first job", 60% felt the job was related to their academic major, 74% believed their major helped to prepare them for the job and 70% were satisfied with the job. Job satisfaction did not result in loyalty to the employer. Of those who claimed to be satisfied with their first job, 46% left for a new employer or to go to graduate school full time.

Twenty-three (23) of the 194 survey respondents are currently full-time graduate or professional school students. Of the remaining 171 alumni, 153 or 89% are employed. Sixty-six percent (66%) of the currently employed alumni reported that the positions they now hold are related to their major. Sixty-nine percent (69%) indicated they were satisfied with their current position.

Of the 194 respondents, 184 answered the question "Did the education you received at Lincoln prepare you for the world of work?" The ten alumni who did not answer that question have been enrolled in graduate or professional schools since leaving Lincoln and have not yet been employed. Seventy-eight percent (78%) of those who answered the question indicated that the education they received at Lincoln had prepared them for work.

The returned surveys were divided into two groups, one composed of former co-op students and those alumni who had not taken advantage of co-op, and the results were somewhat surprising. Co-op alumni were more likely to be employed and working in a field related to their

King Remembered At Convocation

The annual observance of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday was held on Jan. 14 in Mary Dod Brown Memorial Chapel. Claude A. Lewis, editor of the Philadelphia-based National Leader, was the guest speaker. In his opening remarks Lewis paid tribute to Langston Hughes, who "got me involved in the written word."

Referring to Dr. King as a truly decent and great man, Lewis spoke of the difficulty in trying to capsule him. "King was someone you experience. He was a great world figure—not just an Atlantan, a Georgian, or an American. He was a man for all the world—a man who saw people in whole terms, not just in issues. He had a place in his heart for all people. He had the great ability to love which makes him a man for all reasons."

Lewis told his audience that people are going about it in the wrong way to get King's birthday recognized as a national holiday. "You do not seek permission to observe King's birthday as a holiday. You take it. You take it by not going to school, by not showing up for work, by not doing the usual things expected of you. You seize the opportunity and you create a holiday."

Dr. King was described as a man who did not define people in terms of skin color or pigmentation. A Black man, he spoke out against injustice against all people anywhere in the world. He stood for love, not hatred, and given the choice, he elected non-violence over violence. He was, in Lewis's words, "our own Black shining prince of peace. What gave Martin Luther King meaning was what he accomplished between his birth and his death, hence the importance of the dash between 1929 and 1968. He was not a wealthy man in the usual sense of the word, but he was rich in principles. Poverty of the spirit he never experienced."

In his concluding remarks, Lewis commented that Dr. King made the world see the reality of race prejudice and he was helped by strong adversaries like George Wallace and Bull Connors, whom he loved in spite of their positions. "He could not hate, for hate dilutes the ability to help. He never lost the happy affliction for helping people. So honor his memory in ways that would please him. Stand up for justice and equality. We must put our shoulders to the wheel in an effort to create a new society. We must be committed. We must dream dreams as Martin Luther King did."

Lincoln University students who have studied abroad also told of their experiences.

As a part of its celebration of Foreign Language Week, the Department sponsored International Night on Nov. 11. The French, Spanish, and Russian Clubs performed dances, skits, and songs in their respective languages. Each club served food typical of the country it represents.

The Lectures and Recitals Committee in conjunction with the Department of English presented Margaret Walker, distinguished poet and novelist at a special convocation on Oct. 27. Student poets were invited to read their works at a reception held for Miss Walker in the Langston Hughes Memorial Library.

On Oct. 14 Drs. Regina Turner, Judith Thomas, and Joseph Rodgers attended a Black Studies Research Workshop at the University Park Campus of the Penn State University. Dr. Thomas and Dr. Rodgers were asked to serve on a panel to discuss the special problems and opportunities related to sponsored research at historically Black institutions in Pennsylvania. Dr. Rodgers was a member of the Pennsylvania Department of Education Evaluation Team assigned to review the education program at Gannon College Oct. 26-28 and to make recommendations for renewal of professional education programs. On Oct. 29 he attended a meeting of the Black Conference on Higher Education at Robert Morris College in Coraopolis, Pa. Dr. Rodgers is secretary of the organization. Also attending the conference were Dr. Turner, Dr. Thomas, and Professor Theresa Saunders.

Dr. Judith Thomas and Mrs. Ura Jones addressed the students and faculty of the Scotland School for Veteran Children on "School Talk and Home Talk: Should There Be a Difference?" Dr. Thomas is chairperson of the Department of Education and Mrs. Jones is a counselor in the TIME Program. Dr. Thomas addressed the Career Conference Seminar at Coatesville High School on Dec. 4. The Department of Education has been funded for the second year by the Pennsylvania Department of Education to work with Kennett Consolidated Schools, the Oxford School District, and Coatesville Schools in the area of Reading Diagnosis. Drs. Mary and Anthony Applegate wrote the proposals. They recently presented papers for the College Language/Reading Teachers Association and the Keystone State Reading Association. Dr. Mary Applegate is the newly elected president of the Chester County Reading Association.

The Pennsylvania Department of Education's Evaluation Team reviewed all 14 of the Teacher

Certification Program and two new ones, the Graduate Reading Certification Program and the Early Childhood Education Program Nov. 10-12. All programs were given a five-year approval except the two new programs. The policy of the Department is to review nearly approved programs a year after the initial visit.

Dr. Jean A. White has been elected to the Board of the Cerebral Palsy Association and to the Board of Directors of the Oxford Area Neighborhood Services Center. On Dec. 4 Dr. White joined Dr. Judith Thomas as panelists at the Coatesville Area Career Conference. The theme was "Prepare Today for Work Tomorrow." The conference was co-sponsored by the Southeastern Chester County Business and Professional Women's Club, the Philadelphia Electric Company, and the Coatesville Area School District.

Recent Alumni

major, but the difference between the two groups was not statistically significant. However, there was a great difference between the co-oping and non-co-oping alumni in their perception of whether or not their education at Lincoln had prepared them to assume jobs: 10% of the co-op alumni stated that their education had not adequately prepared them to enter the world of work; in contrast, nearly 30% of the alumni lacking the co-op experience indicated that their education at Lincoln had not sufficiently equipped them for employment.

Grouping the returned survey by majors also indicated some surprising results. As indicated on the attached matrix the only department with a 100% alumni employment ratio was Physical Education and Recreation. These two majors also had the highest percentage of alumni (91%) who believed their education had adequately prepared them for work. Science and Math majors, who had the highest average salaries (according to data from previous surveys), were among those least satisfied with their current jobs. Thirty-six percent (36%) of Humanities majors were less likely to be working in a job related to their major, though 79% were satisfied with their current jobs, which is the second highest percentage of reporting alumni, in the area of satisfaction.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the survey was that the Sociology and Human Services alumni had the highest job satisfaction ratio — 82%. This is surprising, in view of the fact that previous surveys indicated these alumni had the lowest average salaries compared to their peers.

Humanities and Psychology departments had the highest percentage of alumni who are currently enrolled in or have completed a graduate or professional school program (58% and 50% respectively). Business/Economics (22%) and Physical Education/Recreation (30%) alumni were the least likely to have continued their education after leaving Lincoln. Of the 194 survey respondents, 68 or 35% have continued their education after graduation.

Overall, the results of the survey indicate that our recent alumni are satisfied with the work environment in which they have found themselves after graduation and also they believe the education received at Lincoln prepared them to enter the world of work.

Spotlight On Alumnus L. Deckle McLean

(The information used here was taken from an article by Lillian Tarpey in the JOURNAL of the New Jersey Dental Association/Fall 1982.)

He was told, "It is not the policy of the Hudson County Dental Society to have Negro dentists affiliated," and, yet, this same dentist, a native of Barbados, was later to become the first black dentist in the country to serve as president of a component society, and the first and only black dentist to become president of a state dental association. Hudson can take credit for having the first black component president, and the New Jersey Dental Association takes pride in being the first and only state association to elect a black president back in 1973.

Eighty-two year old L. Deckle McLean has lived through what he describes as "a period of rampant institutional and individual racism in America." He says individual racism is the action of the individual white against an individual black, and institutional racism is the total white community or institution acting against the black community.

The Hudson County dentist, who is still practicing dentistry after 53 years, says that the Hudson County component was not the only one to practice discrimination back in 1929. "At the same time," he says, "Bergen County had a prohibition against Jewish membership, and, to a lesser degree, against Catholics. Because of this, Hudson acquired some excellent Jewish members."

Timing was against Deckle McLean. He opened his practice on October 14, 1929 — just two weeks before the Wall Street crash. His means were meager and he was precluded from continuing education courses sponsored by the Hudson County component and the New Jersey Dental Society as the state association was known in those days. Because of this, he had to pay higher tuition fees for short courses at Columbia, New York University and the University of Pennsylvania.

During those seven years without component, constituent or ADA membership, Dr. McLean became active in the Commonwealth Dental Society of North Jersey, served through the chairs and became president, serving from 1939 to 1941. The Commonwealth, together with the Robert T. Freeman Dental Society of Washington, D.C., and the old Dominion Dental Society, created the National Dental Association in the early 1930's in Bordentown, N.J.

Queried as the validity of the statement that he is the first and only black dentist to become a state dental association president, he said, "This is what I am told. If it is true, it is a sad commentary on the dental profession. I am also told that I am the first and only black dentist to serve as a chairman of state delegates to the ADA. If true, this is also testimony to the racism that remains in our profession at the organizational level. I know that for two successive years an alternate delegate from D.C. informed me that I was the only black delegate of the approximately 417 delegates on the floor. Standing alone, this makes a statement of some kind — 'the Delegate from New Jersey.' However, I am not sure I know what that statement is."

Although he was slighted by the Hudson component in the early years, today Deckle McLean is considered one of the "outstanding dentists of Hudson" and was so described by Dr. Thomas DeStefano, installing officer at Hudson's recent dinner for new officers. Two years ago, the component honored him with a special award.

Awards have been many through the years for this extraordinary man who worked as a carpenter, shipwright and journeyman patternmaker before becoming a dentist. The American College of Dentistry presented a speakers' lectern to the New Jersey Dental Association in his honor in 1974, and he received the Afro-American Award in 1956 for "superior public service without thought of gain." B.S. Pollak Lodge 295 presented him with the B'nai Brith Brotherhood Award in 1957 for "promoting good will and brotherhood in Jersey City."

Dr. McLean graduated from Lincoln University in Pennsylvania in 1924, and, in 1957, his alma mater presented him with an honorary Doctor of Science degree. A graduate of the College of Dentistry at Howard University in 1928, 35 years later, Howard presented him with the general Alumni Award. He was president of the senior class at Howard. The New Jersey College of Dentistry made him an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters in 1973, and, in 1974, he was named "Dentist of the Year" by the National Dental Association and "General Practitioner of the Year" by the Academy of General Dentistry of New Jersey.

His interests are many and he is presently serving on the Board of Directors of the Jersey City YMCA (he was president from 1972 to 1974), yet at one time he wasn't allowed inside the YMCA. He is serving on the advisory committee of the New Jersey Dental Service Plan, Inc., as a member of the Board and the Foundation of the UMDNJ, and as a member of the I. Franklin Miller Study Group of New York.

He was made a Fellow of the American College of Dentistry in 1961 and served as chairman of the New Jersey Section of the ACD from 1972-73. A member of Omicron Kappa Upsilon (National Honorary Dental Society), he is former president of the Commonwealth Dental Society of New Jersey (1939-41), the Jersey City Chapter, NAACP (1939-41), and Howard University Dental Alumni Association (1955-56).

A former member of the Jersey City Board of Education, Mr. McLean also served on the Board of Directors of the Paul Revere Boys Club of Jersey City, the advisory board of the Salvation Army, the advisory committee of the Health Professions Educational Master Plan, as deputy foreman of the Hudson County Grand Jury, and on the Board of Trustees of the NJDSP.

Approximately 40 of Mr. McLean's practice years had passed when there came into being pre-payment (third party dentistry) dental insurance. "Despite the fact that I had participated in its development in New Jersey, I would not have chosen it for myself," Deckle says, explaining, "It seemed somehow to intrude on my self-employment, my reason for becoming a dentist in the first place. Of course, that was more in my head than actual."

"However, from the beginning, I had a firm conviction that dental insurance of the Delta Plan type would serve two important purposes:

It would make available good dental health care to more people in need of it and it eventually would be the bulwark in the survival and maintenance of private practice dentistry in the USA. To me, private practice is the dental practice of choice for both the served and the server."

Mr. McLean says he served on NJDA's Council on Dental Care under the dedicated leadership of Chairman Joseph Pollock. Eight years elapsed before passage of the enabling legislation, required in New Jersey, to establish a dental service plan. Then, came three more years of seriously arduous work, still under the chairmanship of Joseph Pollock, with the competent and indispensable advice and direction of Dr. Robert Eilers, of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

"Eventually," he recalls, "the night came when I was one of the 15 signatures to the papers of incorporation. The Board of Trustees of the New Jersey Dental Service Plan, Inc. was composed of seven lay persons and seven dentists plus a president who could be either dentist or a lay person. Dr. Joseph Pollock was elected the first president and continues to be elected."

At 82, is Deckle McLean thinking of retiring? It is very difficult to even think of this dynamic man retiring even though it is something he so richly deserves. He says, "Perhaps I'll have to do some thinking about retiring. But, really, I'm not old enough to retire. You see, I believe, that as long as body and mind (or better the other way around) sustain you, you do not grow old unless you stop growing — at which time you are indeed old. I have an idea box at home with three by five inch cards of ideas of many things I plan to do. I need many years after the turn of the century to actuate these ideas. They are all horizontal top priority. Therefore, I'll have to execute them by mood and not by importance. This alone is pleasant to contemplate."

Deckle McLean has played many roles and influenced many lives for the better. If, as he says, "You are not a Professional until you abide by a Code of Ethics," then, we, of the New Jersey Dental Association, say, "Deckle McLean — You are a Professional!"

A 20-year-old Lincoln University music major won first place in a music competition held at the Holiday Inn Rivermont Hotel in Memphis, TN recently. Ernest Gerald Saunders won a $2,000 scholarship -- the James Oglethorpe Patterson Fine Arts Scholarship Award. His winning piano selection was "Sonata for Left Hand" by Carl Reinecke. He also sang a spiritual, "If God is Dead."

Representatives from 30 of the United States took part in the competition. The seven finalists won awards ranging from $700 to $2,000.

One crucial dimension of Mr. Saunders' talent is his ability to transcend a physical handicap; he has only one finger on his right hand and therefore must play primarily with his left hand. Such a handicap, which might ordinarily discourage others, has not inhibited Mr. Saunders from achieving musical excellence.

The New Jerusalem Church of God in Christ in Chester, where Mr. Saunders is an organist and director of their choirs, sponsored his trip to Memphis. A junior, Mr. Saunders is director of Lincoln's Gospel Ensemble and a member of both the Lincoln University Chorale and Militants for Christ. Ernest, who graduated from Chester High School in 1980, is the son of Carolyn and Tracy Saunders of Chester.

AN APPEAL: Join The Century Club

The Alumni Relations Office and the General Alumni Association have organized the CENTURY CLUB as a rescue operation to maintain Lincoln's future in a declining economy. With the 1982-83 enrollment down approximately 200 students, Lincoln stands to lose $200,000 in student fees.

Lincoln's enrollment has suffered a steady enrollment decline in recent years. From a high of 1400 students in 1975, enrollment has dropped to about 800 students. The resulting financial pressure, coupled with declining state and federal aid funds, will have a widespread effect in the area of higher education.

As Director of Alumni Relations, I feel that the alumni can fill the void by becoming a member of the CENTURY CLUB with a special yearly contribution of $100.00. If one half of our mailing list — approximately 5000 graduates and former students — respond to the situation, Lincoln would have around $250,000.00.

Many years have gone by since the alumni have had a fund raising program. Let's support the Alumni Relations Office and the General Alumni Association collective efforts and make this fund raiser a success.

Women's Basketball

Coach Barbara Crittenden has the difficult task of molding ten freshmen and three upperclassmen into a competitive Division III team. Three of the freshmen were selected as Philadelphia All-Public League first team players. They are point guard Bernadette Clayton of Southern High School, swing player Trina Clark of Simon Gratz High School, and forward Martina Slowe of West Philadelphia High School.

The returning players include forward Darla Wade, guard Tammy Taliaferro and point guard Tonya Williams. These players are expected to provide the maturity that will serve to maintain team unity.

Although the Lady Lions are a young team, it is rich in basketball playing experience from summer leagues, camps and clinics. Coach Crittenden is looking forward to a successful season with her exciting, fast-breaking Lady Lions.

Trina Clark was named Philadelphia Area Women's Basketball Player of the Week — College Division for the week ending January 16, 1983. She will be honored at the next Philadelphia Area Women's Basketball Press Luncheon, to be held at Pagano's Restaurant in Philadelphia on February 9.

Trina is averaging 23 points per game, 9 rebounds per game and 4.0 steals per game. She has a lot of hustle and sparks the Lady Lions on offense and defense. Congratulations, Trina!

Martina Slowe was also selected by the Philadelphia Inquirer as a Player of the Week.

The Lady Lions are in 1st Place and undefeated in the Pennsylvania Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (PAIAW) Division III with a record 5-0. Overall record is 6-8.

A record number of contestants, wheelchair-bound 14-year-olds and up, competed in 20 different events to make the day a great success, according to program coordinator, James L. DeBoy. Trophies were awarded to all competitors by DeBoy, and Frank "Tick" Coleman, Lincoln University's Director of Alumni Relations, was on hand to present each contestant with a Lincoln University t-shirt as a token of appreciation for their participation.
