Civil rights leader, lawyer, diplomat, organizer of the Peace Corps and its first African-American director, United Nations representative, president of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, associate of Thurgood Marshall, and first chair of a unique judicial commission dedicated to racial fairness, Franklin Hall Williams, an alum of Lincoln University, was a visionary and trailblazer who devoted his life to the pursuit of civil rights—not through acrimony and violence and hatred, but through reason and example. His inspiring life story and his impact on the civil rights movement is captured in this brilliant documentary.

Join us for a screening of the documentary and a panel discussion of Franklin Williams’ inspiring life story and his impact on the civil rights movement.
